

AM Point-of-Sale

MACC has created a powerful Point-of-Sale (POS) system that is specifically designed for the needs of the telecommunications industry. Our POS system gives telecom companies everything they need to easily, yet effectively, control multiple offices and inventory locations.

Computers to cash registers

MACC's POS system empowers telecommunication companies to literally create fully-functioning cash registers out of almost any computer with an easy-to-use and affordable solution. Using our POS system, your company's customer service representatives can accept cash, checks, and credit cards for any of the merchandise commonly sold in your office today. Thanks to the system's built in flexibility, you can enter an almost unlimited number of UPC codes for the items in your inventory. Plus, the system can print useful receipts on the spot for your customers' records.

A scalable solution

We designed our POS system to meet the needs of all telecommunication companies, regardless of their size and location. Whether your company only needs the system installed on one computer, in one office, or you have a need for many installations in multiple locations, MACC's POS system has the flexibility to easily meet this challenge.

Unlike the POS systems of other vendors, our system has the ability to let individual employees conveniently utilize POS drawers from multiple locations as required to meet the needs of your operation.

Commissions made easy

Since the use of commissions is playing a much larger role for telecommunication companies today, we made sure our POS system can efficiently record and calculate this important data. With MACC's POS system, commissions are not only calculated, but labor records are automatically created based on this information.

Beyond the sale

Our POS system's capabilities don't end once the sale is made and the commission is calculated. The POS system can automatically enter cash sales and deposit entries into your company's general ledger. You can even interface the POS system with Accounting Master's AR and inventory modules. This interface can make your operations even more efficient and help ensure the accuracy of your company's inventory records.
